Rijksoverheid

Asked to share your details online, fast?

Give yourself 3 seconds.
In doubt? Click away!

Don't get scammed online.

Online criminals pose as:

helpdesk employee
delivery company friend family member

Two in three people face an attempted cybercrime every year. And each year, more than 2.4 million Dutch people fall victim.

Online criminals pretend to be someone else, such as a delivery company or someone you know, to steal your personal information or your money.

1 Give yourself 3 seconds...

Online criminals want you to react or take action now. They put you under pressure, so you may not immediately realise what is happening. For example, they might threaten to return your parcel. Instead, take a moment before you do anything.

2 Think: does this seem right? Is it real?

Does the message appear to come from a delivery company you know? Are they asking you to quickly enter your address or make a payment? Think about whether you actually ordered anything and how they got your details.

3 If in doubt: click away!

Check the sender. Check the email address or phone number. Don't recognise it? Don't click the link or share any personal information. Click away and contact the company using a phone number or email address you know is genuine.

For more information, visit laatjenietinterneppen.nl

Need help?
Call
DIGI HULP LIJN
0800 1508

Has something gone wrong?
Report it to the police
0900-8844